Re: Planetary Defense

President Bush: Sir,

Last chance to start Saving the World on your watch...

Beginning in February and ending in June of 2009, over the course of three meetings of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, the Association of Space Explorers will be presenting the issue of mankind's response to the threat of asteroid impact to the United Nations in an appeal to elicit its involvement and leadership in addressing this challenge.

Even if they succeed we are all still doomed... It's the United Nations! This has all the strategic wisdom of planning to bring a knife to a gunfight!

To put this business on the right track and the United States in its proper leadership role, in this 11th hour of your administration, we need a national policy determination that "We will endeavor to deflect these objects as they are discovered to be impending impact threats" and a rational agency delegation - perhaps in the form of a National Security Directive - to DoD to do so.

If left to your successor there may not be sufficient time or the political disposition to preempt or supplant any United Nations' deceleration in this and we may well find the security and very existence of this nation, if not all of mankind, in the hands of the world's largest political eunuch.

We need to set the precedent now.
